My name is Leonardo Palmerini and I'm one of the developers of Elmer, a video game belonging to the metroidvania genre, with elements of adventure, puzzle solving and a stealth approach.

Elmer's demo serves as an introductory level, where the player learns the basic mechanics.

The complete game involves the exploration of a vast world divided into seven macro-areas connected and populated by extravagant individuals and shady characters.

In the world of Altroquando, there are many mysterious stories to undertake, which will lead the protagonist to disturbing implications.

The idea is to create a vast world filled with unique characters, each with a life of their own within the game. Our goal is to provide the player with a truly immersive experience where interactions with characters are essential to the progression of the story.

In addition, there will be various boss fighting mechanics, which is a major challenge for the players.

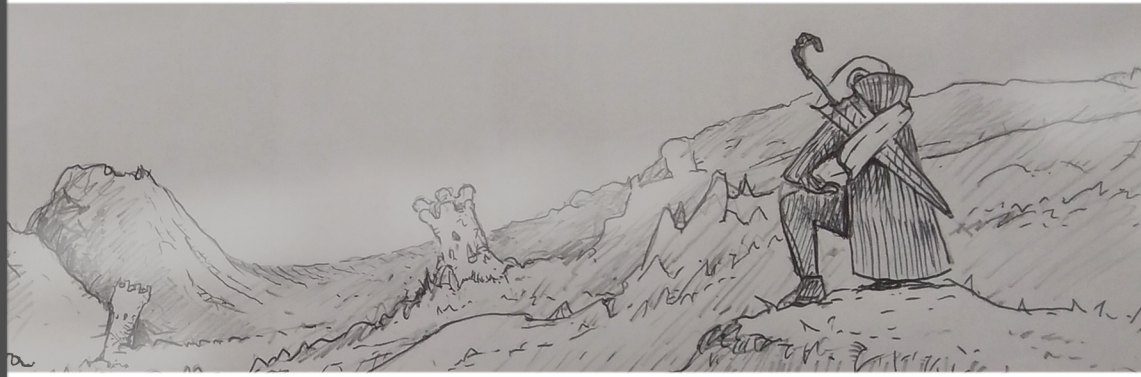

Elmer's storyline is mysterious and complex, with numerous side quests that allow players to explore the game world and discover new plot elements.

Finally, we cannot fail to mention the famous Altroquando bar "Sullivan", a place where players can listen to excellent music and relax after intense gaming sessions. Elmer's original soundtrack will be long and varied, with music that fits perfectly with the mood of the game.
